Sajid A. Surve, DO is a triple-board certified physician in physical medicine and rehabilitation, neuromusculoskeletal medicine/osteopathic manipulative medicine, and pain medicine. He graduated from Rowan University School of Osteopathic Medicine in 2005. While completing his residency training in New York, Dr. Surve worked for three years with the Center for Sports and Osteopathic Medicine under the direction of Richard M. Bachrach, DO, FAOASM, the legendary performing arts medicine physician. In 2009, Dr. Surve returned to Rowan University as a faculty member. While there, he helped expand the newly formed Chateau Gardot Music Medicine Program to include Dance Medicine, and partnered with the Rowan University College of Performing Arts to create a Performing Arts Clinic. Dr. Surve left Rowan University in 2014 to join UNT Health Science Center, where he currently teaches and sees patients.
